ADP Canada Honoured as having one of the Top Innovative HR Teams by HRD Magazine

ADP recognized for providing novel solutions to help employers navigate evolving work environments

TORONTO, March 29, 2022 – ADP Canada is pleased to announce it has been recognized for having one of the Top Innovative HR Teams by Human Resources Director (HRD) Canada.

HRD Canada's annual Innovative HR Teams Report recognizes companies that are breaking boundaries and analyzes key HR trends that facilitated change across the country. Nominations focused on talent management, diversity and inclusion, health and wellness, and HR technology.

ADP Canada was acknowledged for the cutting-edge services and solutions that enabled its HR team to better recruit, engage and retain employees in a remote and hybrid work environment. ADP's remote talent management platforms facilitated ongoing communication and dialogue throughout the pandemic, and identified key strengths and tasks valued by employees, to ultimately increase engagement.

"As an HR services provider, it is especially rewarding to be recognized as having one of the most innovative HR teams in our field," said Andrea Wynter, Head of Human Resources Canada at ADP Canada. "From even prior to the start of the pandemic, and continuing throughout, our platforms and our HR team sought out new ways to align with employees, understand their priorities and quickly adapt to meet their needs. At ADP, we are always looking for opportunities to propel the industry forward and we remain deeply committed to excellence in innovation."

"As one of the Top Innovative HR Teams this year, ADP Canada's human resources team is one of the best and brightest examples of HR teams that harnessed innovation," said Fred Crossley, Director of Business Development, HRD Magazine. "Their initiatives rose to the top and exuded true innovation coupled with proven success. ADP's expertise and commitment to simplicity left the team well equipped to adapt to, and shape, the changing workplace environment."
